

NHI provides training in housekeeping

NHI has recently enrolled a new group of housekeeping students on a training programme which is linked to employment and funded by the Ministry of Manpower.

The programme is designed to give the students an insight to the work of the housekeeping department and includes training in the use of equipment and chemicals.

The programme, accredited by City and Guilds of London, gives the students a chance to experience real industry through the servicing of the guestrooms at NHI - Al Daleh suites, which are hired out to the general public. This facility gives the students the opportunity to understand the expectations of customers in hotels and to understand the standards needed.

NHI has been instrumental in delivering hands on vocational training programmes for the hospitality industry for several years and has many success stories working in the industry.
